

Culture of Care

The University:

- Believes that good science requires good animal welfare.
- Believes that everyone involved in research using animals should always show caring and respectful attitudes and behaviour towards them and to each other.
- Believes that each person should take responsibility and be accountable in all aspects of animal care and use.
- Will provide a supportive, inclusive and equality driven environment where concerns can be raised with confidence to promote the wellbeing of staff working with animals.
- Will implement the 3Rs (Replacement, Reduction and Refinement) as fully as possible, moving to non-animal methods wherever they can be used.
- Will implement refined methods as they become available and will endeavour to provide animals with best practice housing conditions.
- Will be open and transparent and will communicate the University of Dundee's use of animals in research with the wider community.
